In conjunction with an announcement by Governor Shumlin and others today about progress involving the Lowell Wind Project, Brad Ferland, President of the Vermont Energy Partnership, issued the following statement.

“Today’s announcement about progress in making the Lowell Wind Project a reality is welcome news for Vermont. This clean power will be a valuable part of the state’s energy future. Moreover, Vermont needs to generate a lot more electricity instead of relying so heavily as we do on the New England grid.”

The Vermont Energy Partnership is a diverse group of more than 90 business, labor, and community leaders committed to finding clean, affordable and reliable electricity solutions to ensure Vermont stays a great place to live and work. Our mission is to educate policy makers, the media, businesses, and the general public about optimal solutions to preserve and expand our electricity network.
